

The Existential Resistance
Today is a day closer to death. Use it well.

This jacket will not make up for the emptiness you feel within.

The money you spent on this bag could pay for education, health and social care of a child in the third world.

Volunteering would have brought you more joy than this tawdry display of sartorial one-upmanship!

One's wealth is measured by the people who fill our lives not by the accumulation of expensive objects.

Congratulations on your latest purchase, you embody the selfish, wasteful, superficial vision of Thatcherite Britain perfectly!

How long did the high from this purchase last. Would ecstasy have been better value?
